| 13 | Hi, not really a question, but want to point out that: 1. Pball played on a dedicated court is ideal, but overlay on tennis courts with very good nets works great too. Playing on basketball courts, with their non-rectangular lines, is really not good. 2. Indoor play on gym floors (as opposed to court surface) has a very different feel, liked by some, but is also not liked by many people and requires different shoes to be safe, | live answered |

| 36 | I think the sport is very new and there is always possibility of the demand going up but also going down. I caution ourselves that there is a fine line between a small group of people wanting this yesterday and proper due diligence and process and communication being followed. Town meeting date seems to be mentioned too often to the point of concern. I am indifferent to pickle ball but surely will be watching the due diligence process that will be followed for the decision making process | live answered |

Also, I hope you realize, it's not the loudness of pball itself, it's the rapid repition of impulse noise that is totally distracting and annoying. Owl paddles don't work when you live 30 feet from courts, LindenSq-Sprague. The kids at Sprague are not playing pball, the School Comm understands they do not belong there. | live answered |
